SUMMARY

The client has an average level of intelligence. His test results scored a normal level in general reasoning ability. Upon assessment, the client's test results scored a very high level in Agreeableness. He may easily trust others and usually assume the best about anyone he meets. He is more likely to be very candid and sincere and would find it difficult to deceive or manipulate others. He also tends to put other people's needs and interests before his own. He is possible to be humble and unassuming. He tends to avoid having conflict with others and dislikes being the center of attention. Moreover, he was able to score a high level in Extraversion, Openness to experience and Conscientiousness. The most distinctive result among the three is his rate in Conscientiousness. He may adhere strictly to his ethical principles and scrupulously fulfill his moral obligations as he understands them. He may have a high aspiration level and works hard to achieve his goals. He is diligent and purposeful and has a sense of direction in life. He may also invest too much in his careers and become workaholic. Lastly, he scored a low level in Neuroticism. He may be more calm and relaxed. He does not dwell on things that might go wrong. He finds it easier to resist temptations and have a high tolerance for frustration. However, this should not be confused with spontaneity, risk-taking, or rapid decision time. Overall, the client is well adjusted at the time of assessment.

PSYCHOLOGICAL EVALUATION No psychotic ideation manifested at the time of assessment.
