Specification:

With the shifting of consumer preferences toward organic and naturally produced products, native chicken has a growing market as they are relatively high-tolerant to diseases which require minimal to no use of antibiotics and free from other synthetic chemical residues.

The Philippine chickens are usually named after their locality. Boholano, Camarines and ZamPen are from the provinces of Bohol, Bicol and Zamboanga Peninsula, respectively, while Darag is the native chicken of Panay Island, Western Visayas.
